Series participant dies of leukemia

WAUKESHA, Wis. (UPI) — A 17-year-old leukemia victim who was befriended by Milwaukee Brewers pitcher Don Sutton and who threw out the first ball in a World Series game has died.

Robert Bartholf, 17, died at his home Saturday of complications from leukemia.

Sutton had visited Milwaukee Children's Hospital and met Bartholf. He mentioned him to reporters after the Brewers won the American League pennant Oct. 10.

Sutton's visit to the youth was publicized and the youth, although he was seriously ill, tossed the ceremonial first ball Oct. 15 in the third game of the Series.

"It really brightened up his last few days," said his father, Donald. "Bobby was disappointed we lost,

Ex-CIA agent set to testify found dead

WOODSTOCK, Va. (UPI) — A former CIA agent, expected to testify at the trial of ex-agent Edwin Wilson for allegedly supplying arms to Libya, was found dead in a Shenandoah County motel room Tuesday, officials said.

The Shenandoah County sheriff's department identified the man as Kevin Mulcahy. Richmond FBI supervisor Frank Drumm confirmed the body was that of the former CIA agent.

FBI spokesman Roger Young said there were no indications of foul play but that "obviously we will have to wait for the medical examiner's report."

The body was taken to the state medical examiner's office for an autopsy.

Justice Department sources said Mulcahy was expected to testify next month at the trial of Edwin Wilson, who is charged with shipping arms to Libya. Mulcahy's death is not expected to affect the trial, which is scheduled to begin Nov. 22 in Washington, a department source said.

Reports published a year ago said Mulcahy had worked with Wilson.

The Washington Post said the CIA's investigation into Wilson's dealings with Libya began in 1976 when Mulcahy telephoned the CIA and told officials that Wilson, former agent Frank Terpil and others were operating a massive terrorism support program for Libyan's radical dictator, Col. Moammar Khadafi.

The newspaper reported Mulcahy said he decided to break with the operation after Wilson instructed him to buy a heat-seeking missile from General Dynamics Corp. for the Libyans.

Mulcahy said he feared the missile might be used in a terrorist attack on a commercial airliner, the newspaper reported.

Authorities set an elaborate trap to lure Wilson back to the United States in June. He is being held in lieu of $60 million bond and also faces two other trials in connection with the arms charges.

He is scheduled to stand trial on Oct. 27 in Houston and on Nov. 15 in Alexandria, Va., on some of the charges.

Wilson, who worked as a covert agent for the CIA from 1955 to 1970, first was indicted in 1980 on charges of illegally shipping explosives to Libya as part of an operation to train Libyan terrorists.

Mulcahy, the son of a CIA employee, worked for the CIA "for a number of years," a CIA spokesman said. He left the agency at a relatively early age.

Talks fail to end tobacco tariff

TOKYO (UPI) — U.S. trade representatives failed Tuesday to persuade Japanese officials that elimination of tariffs on American tobacco was an essential step toward defusing protectionist sentiments in the United States.

"We've done our best to convince the Japanese that the wolf is at the door," said Deputy Assistant U.S. Trade Representative Joseph A. Massey in announcing the failure after two days of talks.

Tobacco, like automobiles, is a key issue in trade friction between Japan and the United States.

The price of a pack of Larks — the most popular American cigarette in Japan — is about $1.02, compared with about 65 cents for many Japanese brands.

The effective tariff accounts for about 24 cents in the cost of the American brand.

The talks also touched on restrictive Japanese regulations concerning the marketing, advertising and distribution of imported tobacco but "did not reach any specific agreement on any of these topics," he said.

Both sides hope to meet again "before the end of the year" and after elections in both countries, Massey said.

The Japanese have previously agreed to increase the number of retail outlets that are allowed to sell imported cigarettes from 20,000 to 70,000 by the end of fiscal 1983, but Massey discounted the importance of the move.

"The tariff is the real issue," said Massey, who said the combined effect of the tariff and taxes on the tariff give domestic cigarettes an unfair edge over American brands on the Japanese market.

Because of their substantial competitive disadvantage, American cigarettes account for well under 2 percent of all cigarettes sold in Japan, the world's fourth largest tobacco consuming nation.

Massey described the Japanese position as "unyielding" and based on legalistic rather than realistic concerns. He said the Japanese do not seem to take the threat of protectionist barriers in the United States seriously.

Influential cardinal dies of heart attack

FLORENCE, Italy (UPI) — Cardinal Giovanni Benelli, the influential archbishop of Florence who twice almost became pope, died Tuesday of a massive heart attack suffered three days earlier. He was 61.

Benelli, a church conservative who opposed divorce, abortion, artificial contraception and women priests, was one of the youngest cardinals in the Roman Catholic Church.

He died at dawn in his bed surrounded by family at his residence where his sister, Paola Romagnolo, and other close relatives had taken him in accordance with his wishes just one hour before his death.

Sources at Florence's Careggi hospital, where Benelli was hospitalized following the heart attack Friday, said the cardinal pleaded with his family to let him go home.

The Benelli family rejected the plan, however, and had asked doctors to do everything possible to save Benelli's life by keeping him in the hospital.

When his condition deteriorated dramatically Monday evening, his family approved Benelli's last wish — to die at home.

Vatican sources said Pope John Paul II, who last saw Benelli exactly one month ago, was "pained" to hear of the cardinal's death and immediately went to pray in his private Vatican chapel.
